Protest

Mantle Mining Corporation Limited (ASX: MNM) "Mantle", advises of a protest at its Bacchus Marsh coal exploration project:

Mantle notes that a group of protestors gathered today at one of the Company's exploration drilling sites in the Bacchus Marsh project area.

The Company recognises the right to peaceful demonstration however has a duty to ensure the health and safety of people in the immediate vicinity of its operations.

The drilling crew have been advised to stand by to await police clearance of protestors from the site before re-commencing operations.

In January, Mantle held its second Open Day as part of an ongoing community liaison program. The day was peaceful, with good public interest shown, and everyone had opportunity to hear details of the drill program and what it is designed to achieve.

At that Open Day, also in the interests of safety, a number of protestors were invited on to the private property where the Open Day was held (an invitation which they accepted) to ensure there were no traffic hazards on the main road.

Mantle continues to work with stakeholders at all levels, and is of the view that the protest will not have a material impact on ongoing operations.
